

Unboxing the Raspberry Pi

Srisivan.k

I had been yearning for the Raspberry Pi for a long time since my father told he'll buy me one. But he set me a challenge to finish. The challenge was this: I had to write a program for remote, based on the observations of how remotes work.

I worked hard, researching and writing code about the Remote for one week. I finally reached what I wanted, A simple, yet executable, program that would work on my Laptop. After I had sent my father a file containing the code, he told, "Okay. Congrtulations. You have done it." I asked, "Okay. What about the Raspberry Pi?"
